

Kritsachai Somsaman

Dr. Kritsachai is currently a director of SEAMEO Regional Centre for STEM Education, based in Bangkok, Thailand. He was initially a Deputy Director for Administration and Communication at the SEAMEO Secretariat where he led the digital transformation effort to handle the COVID-19 pandemic. In the past, he led the effort in bridging of art and science resulted in various types of comprehensible media ranging from printings, social media to national television programmes which help enhancing public awareness of science and technology in Thailand. His production of a science TV program, titled The Little Scientists' House, brought his team a Mekhala award for best animation series where he also served as a music composer and sound engineer.

