

Lifelong learning for students in this time of pandemic is one of the crucial battle we teachers are facing. During these new normal teachers need to be ready to adjust and adopt for the uncertain situation that may occur. This series of online lectures of SEAMEO greatly help me prepare how to handle the uncertainties along the delivery of learning to our stakeholders which are the learners for I need to deliver quality education to them. This is new to all, the adaptation of new methodologies and transformation of the new teaching-learning process. This give me the foundation not to overwhelm with stress and changes. As of this month I am downloading the different teaching tools and apps in order to make learning more engaging for the learners and be more meaningful to them, for learning will keep on lingering in their life.

I was able to share with my colleagues on how I prepared myself for the opening of classes. I also share to them the, transformative teaching methodologies and approaches shared from other Asian countries, and lastly how ASEAN countries and other allies worked together to become resilient in the very effect of pandemic. Thank you.

Rosalie E. Auman
Teacher III
Cogon National High School
Cogon, Dumanjug, Cebu
Philippines
rosalie.auman001@deped.gov.ph